We all hope to live long, healthy, and productive lives where we can take care of ourselves throughout our retirement years. Today, as people live longer and healthcare expenses continue to rise, the necessity for long-term care planning becomes more of a “when” than an “if” situation. By having a long-term care strategy in place earlier, you'll be better prepared for the tough financial, emotional, and administrative decisions you and your loved ones may need to make.
